

Pandemic Preparedness Seminar

Monitoring the outbreaks throughout the world provides information enabling conclusions and preparations to be made about how the influenza pandemic may evolve in the coming months.

While trends are encouraging, large numbers of people in all countries remain susceptible to infection. Even if the current pattern of usually mild illness continues, the impact of the pandemic during the second wave could worsen as larger numbers of people become infected.

ARE YOU READY!!

The World Health Organization (WHO) is concerned about current patterns of serious cases and deaths that are occurring primarily among young persons, including the previously healthy and those with preexisting medical conditions or pregnancy. This will be a huge impact on your business.

You are invited to attend a no-cost, exclusive half-day seminar:

When: Tuesday, October 20th

Where: The Plaza Club (910 Louisiana, Suite 4960) in Houston, TX.

Presenters:

iJet – leader in business resiliency, helping multinational organizations to protect and respond to global threats.

John Bilotta – DHS Senior Communications Advisor

David Shapinski – Communications specialist. ABC News medical correspondent.

Dr. Scott Lillibridge - Assistant Dean for the Texas A&M Health Science Center. Professor of Epidemiology and Medicine. Director for the Global Health and Security Program in Houston.

Attendance is by invitation only,
There is only room for 100 attendees so confirm your seat as soon as possible.

Following a catered breakfast beginning at 7:00 AM, and to set the stage, iJet and the speakers will provide an overview of the recent H1N1 virus and its' growth prior to round table breakout sessions to address your individual concerns.

Contact Jim Rowan at JRowan@alitek.com to reserve your seat.
